The Chicago Zoological Society and Project Dragonfly at Miami University are excited to announce a conservation-focused, inquiry-driven learning experience. The Advanced Inquiry Program is an online master's degree from Ohio's Miami University that includes inspiring experiential learning at Brookfield Zoo, which is managed by the Chicago Zoological Society. Students earn a master's in biology or a master's in teaching the biological sciences.

- Join a national degree program and earn either a Master of Arts (MA) in Biology or a Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) Biological Science.
- Earn seven optional credits from international travel through Earth Expeditions, a global conservation and education program.
- Contribute to social and ecological change in your community.
- Complete this affordable degree part-time while working.
- The AIP is open to all individuals who meet admission criteria, regardless of profession or background.
- The AIP is an online master's degree conferred by Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.
